Spassky Resigns, Fischer Is Titlist

By Harold C. Schoenberg

REYKJAVIK, Sept. 1 (NYT).—Bobby Fischer, who for years has been saying he is the greatest, proved it today by becoming the chess champion of the world. The first American ever to hold the title, he won it when Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union did not show up for the resumption, at 2:30 p.m., of the game adjourned last night. Instead, Spassky telephoned his resignation to the referee, Lothar Schmid, at 12:50 p.m.

Fischer, who at first refused to come to Exhibition Hall until he had obtained a written statement of resignation from Spassky, was prevailed upon to make an appearance. He came on stage at 2:47, at which point Schmid told the audience of about 2,500:

"Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Spassky has resigned by telephone at 12:50."

At this point the audience broke into applause. Fischer, busy signing his score sheet, nodded his appreciation. "This is a traditional and legal way of resignation," Schmid continued. "Mr. Fischer has won this game No. 21, and he is the winner of the match." The final score was 12 1/2 to 8 1/2.

The audience burst into rhythmic applause and rose. Fischer, still busy signing his score sheet, again nodded, looked uncomfortable, glanced at the audience from the corner of his eyes and rushed off. The audience slowly dispersed.

'What a Way for It To End'

"What a way for it to end," said a visiting American chess player with a pained look. He and his friends had come to the hall three hours early to stand in line and get a good seat.

Shortly after Spassky made up his mind to resign in a lost position, Harry Benson, a photographer for Time-Life, had run into Spassky at the Hotel Saga. Spassky was with his friends and psychologist Nikolai Krogius.

"There's a new champion," Spassky said to Benson. "I'm not sad. It's a sporting event and I lost. Bobby's the new champion. Now I must take a walk and get some fresh air." Benson phoned Fischer and told him the news.

"You're sure it's official?" Fischer wanted to know. "Well, thanks."

Spassky's sealed move would have been bishop to queen 7. Last night experts had guessed that move, and had worked it out on the board. The move lost in all variations, but any other move would have been just as bad. Spassky was in a making net in one system of play, and in the other system Fischer's king rook pawn would have had a clear entry to the queening square.

This ended a battle for chess supremacy that had its moments of glory and its moments of slapstick comedy. Almost forgotten today were the hectic, even delirious, days before the first game when Fischer did not arrive and little hope was given for the match. Almost forgotten are the charges and countercharges, the last-minute negotiations, the wheeling and dealing.

Almost forgotten also by now were Fischer's 14 demands and the Soviet charges of American electronic and chemical cheating. Almost forgotten were the antics of some of Fischer's representatives and of Bobby Fischer himself. Almost forgotten, except by the participants involved, was the great fight over whether the match could be filmed.

But never to be forgotten by anybody who loves chess was the confrontation over the board between Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer. Boris Spassky: 5 feet 10, handsome, urbane, courteous, quiet, admired by all. Bobby Fischer: 6 feet 2, nervous, arrogant, inconsiderate, petulant, demanding. It was a meeting of temperamental opposites—two entirely dissimilar minds and ways of life that touched only at one point: mastery of the 32 pieces and the 64 squares. Both had shown that they were supreme, with an order of imagination and creativity possessed by few other players of the century.

It was billed as the "Match of the Century," and in many ways it was that. The Soviet Union had dominated international chess for a generation, having held the championship since 1948. There was something symbolic in this figure of an eccentric, free-wheeling, terrible-tempered Bobby Fischer coming up to challenge the Russian establishment, just as he had challenged the American establishment. Nixon and Tanaka Hail Parley As 'New Chapter' in Relations

Japan to Buy $1 Billion In U.S. Goods

By Carroll Kilpatrick

HONOLULU, Sept. 1 (WP).—President Nixon and Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka said today their talks here mark the beginning of a "new chapter" in Japanese-American relations and that Mr. Tanaka's forthcoming visit to China will improve the prospect for peace in Asia.

After two days of meetings, the two leaders said they reached agreement on a broad range of issues, including ways to reduce the U.S. trade deficit with Japan by about $1.1 billion.

They reaffirmed their support of the United States-Japan treaty of mutual cooperation and security, the subject of dispute because of its effect on Sino-Japanese relations. The 1969 U.S.-Japan understanding put Taiwan and South Korea under the treaty's umbrella.

Under-Secretary of State U. Alexis Johnson said: "We are entirely satisfied Japan has no intention of acting in any way contrary to our mutual security interests, including Taiwan."

With Mr. Tanaka planning to visit Peking within a month, the two leaders spent considerable time discussing China policy and the Japanese problem of maintaining contacts with Taiwan when it resumes relations with Peking.

Significant Step

A joint statement, after calling the President's visits to Peking and Moscow "a significant step forward," said the two leaders share "the hope that the forthcoming visit of the prime minister to China will also serve to further the trend for the relaxation of tension in Asia."

"In discussing the increasing indications for peace and stability in Asia, the prime minister and the President welcomed the recent opening of dialogue in the Korean peninsula, and the increasingly active efforts of Asian countries for self-reliance and regional cooperation, and shared the hope for an early realization of peace in Indochina," the statement said.

White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler denied a Japanese newspaper report that the President hinted to Mr. Tanaka that the Vietnam war will end this year.

Before departing for San Clemente, Calif., for the Labor Day weekend, Mr. Nixon participated in change of command ceremonies marking the retirement of Adm. John S. McCain Jr., as commander-in-chief of the Pacific, and the assumption of command by Adm. Noel Gayler.

In toasts at a dinner the President gave for his guest last night, Mr. Nixon hailed the talks as "substantive, constructive and positive."

Declaring that the two sides are working toward a solution of outstanding differences, the President said, "We are certainly off to a good start."

The premier said he found the discussions "useful and fruitful." The spirit of friendship at the dinner signified "a new era in our relations," the 54-year-old (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Heaviest in Area Since Offensive Began

Fighting Steps Up on Vietnam Coast

SAIGON, Sept. 1 (UPI).—Communist troops today marked the start of the sixth month of their offensive by engaging South Vietnamese troops in the heaviest coastal highland fighting since the drive began, military spokesmen said.

In addition to the highland battle, intelligence reports warned of Communist plans to intensify already heavy fighting around Quang Tri City to mark two weekend anniversaries—tomorrow's 27th anniversary of the North Vietnamese declaration of independence and Sunday's fourth anniversary of Ho Chi Minh's death.

Major fighting at Quang Tri today appeared to bear out the intelligence reports. Saigon spokesmen said Communist gunners launched an hour-long, 150-round artillery and mortar attack on government marine positions around the besieged city, 435 miles north of Saigon.

To Replace Hanoi Shipments

U.S. Says Russian Tankers Deliver Oil Products to China

By Tad Szulc

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (NYT).—U.S. intelligence sources said yesterday that a number of Soviet tankers had been unloading fuel and other petroleum products in Chinese ports in recent weeks, apparently to replace some of China's deliveries to North Vietnam through two new pipelines.

These intelligence officials said the conclusion that the Soviet deliveries represented such a compensation was based on the fact that China had previously been self-sufficient in petroleum for close to 20 years.

However, intelligence sources said, observations of the movement of Soviet tankers, first seen late in June, suggested that the Russian deliveries appeared to be running below the volume of oil products that China has been pumping to North Vietnam, at the rate of about 1,000 tons a month. Intelligence officials said this appeared to be the first time that China had been sending petroleum products to North Vietnam in meaningful quantities. They noted that before North Vietnamese ports were closed by the minefields laid by the United States in May, Soviet tankers had made their deliveries directly to North Vietnam.

They said that the indications here were that the shipments to North Vietnam through the pipelines were of Chinese origin and that the cargoes currently being transported by Soviet tankers to Chinese ports were intended to replenish in part the Chinese stocks.

Although China is known to produce enough for its own needs, it is not believed to have reached the stage where it can export oil products.

Since the recent completion of the two new pipelines—one was reportedly placed in operation in July, the other early last month—the bulk of fuel and other petroleum products for Hanoi has been flowing through them.

While the officials were reluctant to say how information on Soviet oil deliveries was obtained, it was understood that it came from photographs taken by satellites.

Most of the Soviet tankers have reportedly been unloading in Shanghai. The intelligence sources, however, were reluctant to say precisely how many Soviet tankers have been detected unloading in Chinese harbors.

Canadian Dock Talks

Ordered to Begin

OTTAWA, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—The Canadian government yesterday introduced legislation ordering striking British Columbia dock workers back to work.

The dispute has tied up the port of Vancouver for 24 days and all other British Columbia shipping since Aug. 23. The dockers are demanding higher wages.

Parliament called into special session by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau Tuesday, ordered employers and unions to begin negotiations "forthwith."

36-to-4 Ratio

In five skirmishes that followed, the marines reported killing 36 North Vietnamese at a cost of four government troops dead and five wounded.

In the coastal fighting, a Saigon command spokesman said government militiamen reported killing 29 Communist soldiers in two skirmishes around Tam Quan that left 26 South Vietnamese dead and 21 wounded.

For the second day in a row, U.S. jet fighter-bombers piloted by the 35th Tactical Fighter Wing bombed the port of Cam Pha, northernmost of the North Vietnamese ports mined by the United States. May 8, Cam Pha is 40 miles south of the Chinese frontier. The airmen struck a storage area and reported blowing up three buildings and causing two secondary explosions as well as fires.

The jets also blew up two highway bridges off their support pillars 30 and 34 miles northeast of Haiphong, the U.S. command said. Other U.S. jets bombed the Dan Do Island trans-shipment point 41 miles east of Haiphong and reported starting a fire. They also hit a truck convoy 24 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Tam Quan, 300 miles north of Saigon, is one of three district (county) capitals near the central coast that were captured by the Communists four months ago and recaptured in late July. It and the other two towns, Hanoi and Bong Son, are in northern Binh Dinh Province, the country's largest and rated South Vietnam's most insecure even before the offensive began.

Today, Communist gunners showered 600 rounds of mortar, artillery and rocket fire on Tam Quan's militia post and a ranger outpost half a mile to the south. Two militiamen were killed in the shelling. An hour later, the commandos attacked the ranger outpost and in fighting that followed, 21 Communists were killed with 24 rangers dead and 21 wounded.

Hanoi Claims 71 Jets
PAIGS, Sept. 1 (AP).—Hanoi claimed today that 71 American aircraft were shot down over North Vietnam from Aug. 2 to 28, according to a communiqué from the North Vietnamese delegation to the Paris peace talks. The communiqué said this brought the total of U.S. plane losses in the past five months to 420, including ten B-52s.

The North Vietnamese said a number of the pilots had been captured but did not give a specific figure.

Russian Ends U.S. Dominance In 100 Meters

MUNICH, Sept. 1 (AP).—Valery Borov of Russia (photo at right) streaked to victory in the Olympic 100-meter dash, and Australian and Japanese girls shattered world records in swimming races Friday as U.S. dominance in these specialties declined.

Two U.S. sprinters—Eddie Hart and Ray Robinson—who share the world record of 9.9 sec in the 100-meter dash, were victims of a mishap that caused them to miss their quarter-final heats.

Borov was timed in 10.14 seconds, to keep intact his unbeaten victory string outdoors over the past 2 1/2 years. Robert Taylor of the United States was second in 10.24 and Lennox Miller of Jamaica was third in 10.33.

Sendic, Leader of Tupamaros, Shot, Captured in Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 1 (AP).—Shouting defiance, Raul Sendic, founder of Uruguay's Tupamaro guerrillas, was shot and captured by the police today.

An official announcement said a combined police-army force found Sendic, 47, and two other guerrillas in an old house in Montevideo's port area.

The two others, a man and a woman, surrendered, the police said, but Sendic shouted: "I'm Raul, I'm Raul and I won't surrender alive." Raul is his code name in the Marxist-oriented guerrilla movement.

A gunfight followed and Sendic was shot in the head. He was rushed to a hospital for emergency surgery. His condition was described as critical. Authorities did not say how they had found Sendic's hideout.

The two other guerrillas with Sendic were Miss Xenia Iltis Gonzalez, 30, and Jorge Bernardo Ramada Plendibeni, about 30.

Sendic's wife and their three children are living in exile in Chile.

Sendic's capture comes at a moment when the Tupamaros appear to be losing their battle with the authorities. Since mid-April, when the Uruguayan army joined the police to fight the guerrilla movement, more than 1,000 Tupamaros have been captured. Hundreds of arms plus supplies and hideouts have been discovered.

Forty-three people have been killed in the fighting since April. Of the 43 killed, 20 were Tupamaros and the rest were soldiers, policemen and civilians caught in the gunfire.

Many of the captured guerrillas are young professionals—teachers, doctors, lawyers, engineers—usually from middle and upper-class families.

Sendic left law school without graduating to join the Socialist party in the late 1950s.

After two election defeats, however, Sendic left the party and went into the countryside to organize impoverished sugar workers, leading them in strikes and other uprisings in 1969 and 1961.

He became a hero among peasants during this period and his photograph, usually from a police "wanted" poster, can still be found hanging on the walls of some peasant huts.

Sendic led the first Tupamaro raid in July, 1963. With six companions, he seized rifles from a gun club in a rural town 60 miles from Montevideo.

At the time, the police thought common thieves had seized the rifles and gave the raid little thought.

Only years later did the Tupamaros themselves reveal that the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Heath Sets Emergency Talks On Uganda Asian Expulsion

LONDON, Sept. 1 (UPI).—Prime Minister Edward Heath today summoned his two top ministers to emergency talks on the threatened "invasion" of tens of thousands of Asians expelled from Uganda.

He ordered Home Secretary Robert Carr back from vacation on the Greek island of Corfu and scheduled for tomorrow a meeting with him and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home at Chequers, his official country residence.

Government sources said they will concentrate on the growing problems of finding homes, schools and jobs for up to 50,000 Asians in this densely populated island where unemployment and housing shortages already are acute.

The main influx of Asians was expected to start around the middle or end of this month. Ugandan President Idi Amin has ordered all Asian holders of British and other foreign passports out of the East African country by Nov. 7.

A copyrighted Louis Harris poll of public opinion, published in the Daily Express, said only six in every 100 Britons want the Asians to be allowed immediate entry into this country. It said 71 percent of those questioned believe Britain will not benefit by becoming a more multiracial society.

The poll also showed that 39 percent of those questioned would be willing for Britain to pay for the Asians to be allowed immediate entry into this country. It said 71 percent of those questioned believe Britain will not benefit by becoming a more multiracial society.

Twenty percent said Britain should accept the Ugandans over a five-year period, and 36 percent said they did not know what Britain should do, or thought none of the cited solutions was correct.

Amin Is adamant

KAMPALA, Uganda, Sept. 1 (AP).—President Idi Amin said today he would not alter his decision to expel Uganda's 60,000 noncitizen Asians no matter what the British government might try.

Speaking when he laid the foundation stone of a new Moslem headquarters here, watched by Central African Republic President Jean-Bedel Bokassa, he said:

"Whether I am still alive, or whether I am not, anybody who is in my position must not give up but must see that Uganda is completely economically independent."

Commenting directly on last night's statement by Sir Alec Douglas-Home, Gen. Amin said, "Whether the British government campaigns to sabotage the economy of Uganda, or goes and approaches a hundred countries all over the world that they should change my mind, I will not give up and I will not change my mind."

Gen. Amin warned that his government would not accept responsibility for anything that might happen to property belonging to Asians expelled from Uganda which was not registered before the owners left.

The general said he had received information that some Asians to be expelled were planning to lock up their property when they left and deposit the keys with their embassies.

"I want to make it clear that it will be the owners of such properties who will be the losers in the end," he said.

Calls for Shake-Up on McGovern Staff

O'Brien Threat to Quit Campaign

By R.W. Apple Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (NYT).—Evidence of dissension and disarray in the campaign organization of Sen. George S. McGovern came to light yesterday following a veiled threat by Lawrence F. O'Brien to quit as campaign chairman unless remedial action was taken by Monday.

"We have from now to Labor Day to put things in order," Mr. O'Brien, a former Democratic national chairman said, "or the whole campaign is going to drift. I'm trying to convince these people that time's rapidly running out on them."

Mr. O'Brien said in an interview that "everything needs tightening up. At a meeting Wednesday night—the first in a series that will continue through the weekend—Mr. O'Brien and other campaign officials met with Sen. McGovern at his home."

"It went quite well," Mr. O'Brien reported. "Nobody seemed to disagree with what I was saying. But in the end, it's probably a question of where the buck stops. If we can't figure that out, the whole thing may be useless. I have never yet seen a campaign that was run by committee."

[Today, Sen. McGovern said that everyone agrees with Mr. O'Brien that there is still some disorganization in the Democratic campaign, the Associated Press reported. "We want to get that cleaned up this week," Sen. McGovern said. He added that Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Hart met this morning. "I don't have any doubt at all that campaign problems will be worked out," he said.]

[Sen. McGovern also conferred with Mr. Shriver today. Both men later held a joint press conference.]

Mr. O'Brien was brought into the McGovern apparatus as chairman in an effort to quiet the fears of old-line Democrats. But no clear lines of authority have ever been set up, and the campaign leadership has been divided among Mr. O'Brien, Frank Mangiewicz, the political director; Gerry Hart, the campaign manager; Jean Westwood, the party chairman, and Fred Dutton, who has daily access to Sen. McGovern on the road.

Before the meeting, Mr. O'Brien told the Knight Newspapers that "if you see me around here today, you'll know things have been worked out my way." But, (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

et Files Say Army Bugged ate Radio Transmissions

By Seymour C. Hersh

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (UPI).—The Pentagon today announced that it had received information from a source that the military had bugged the radio transmissions of the 1968 Republican Convention and the Nixon trial. The source, who was not identified, said that the bugging was done by the Army's Special Forces, which are responsible for electronic warfare. The source also said that the bugging was done in order to gain information on the activities of the Republican Party and the Nixon administration. The Pentagon said that it was not possible to confirm or deny the source's claims.

Information about the Army's bugging of the 1968 Republican Convention and the Nixon trial was first revealed in a report published by the New York Times in 1970. A Photo Processor Testifies On Filmed Democrats' Letters

By Walter Rugaber

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (UPI).—A photographic processor in Miami said yesterday that two men arrested June 17 in the break-in at Democratic party headquarters had asked him to develop pictures of party documents a week before the break-in occurred.

He said that the two men, Bernard L. Barker and Frank Sturgis, brought two rolls of 35-mm. film to his shop on June 10 and asked for a rush developing job.

The processor, Michael Richardson, 29, of Rich Pines, Fla., said each of 38 exposures showed letters, memoranda, and other documents, many of them from Lawrence F. O'Brien, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Most of the documents were being held in place for copying by hands wearing rubber gloves, Mr. Richardson said. The men arrested during the June 17 break-in wore rubber gloves and carried cameras.

Mr. Richardson's account would provide the closest link to date between the men captured in the Democratic offices on June 17 with one or more earlier raids that party officials have said they believe were made on the party's sixth-floor suite in the elegant Watergate complex here.

Third Man Reported
The account also suggests that there was a serious effort not only to rifle the Democratic files and read documents on the spot but also to retain copies that could be passed on to others.

Mr. Richardson said in a telephone interview yesterday that an unidentified third man had returned with Mr. Barker and Mr. Sturgis when they picked up the prints, and that he was eager to examine them.

The processor said that he had studied pictures of all five men arrested on June 17, and that the third man was none of them. The two men came to his Miami shop at about noon on June 10, Mr. Richardson said, and it was explained to them that since the establishment was about to close there would be a $40 charge for processing the film that day.

He said that Mr. Barker went to a telephone, placed a local call to an unidentified party and then told Mr. Richardson to go ahead with the job.

The work was completed at about 3 p.m., he said, and Mr. Barker, Mr. Sturgis and the unidentified third man came to the back door of the establishment to collect the negatives and 38 prints. A 10-by-7-inch print had been made from each shot.

With the $40 surcharge and the regular fee, Mr. Richardson said, the men paid just under $100 for the pictures. Florida authorities said that the processor had turned over a cash-register tape, recording such a transaction.

Mr. Richardson, in the interview, was unable to describe the documents with precision. He explained that the work had been done in a hurry.

"Basically, most of this was memos back and forth between different [Democratic party] personnel," Mr. Richardson said.

Mr. Richardson said that he did not know the third man, but that he was not a member of the Democratic party. He said that he was not a member of the Democratic party.

Claim They Had Flight Reservations

Bitter Americans Stranded in Spain

MADRID, Sept. 1 (UPI).—Scores of young American tourists face the prospect of camping out at Madrid airport for a week before they can get a flight home. The tourists, mainly students, have tickets but no valid reservations, according to spokesmen for Trans World Airlines. The result is a daily scramble to get spare places on outbound planes.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said: "The group appointed a representative who has been in touch with Vice Consul John Bennett. We explained that in case of financial trouble we can contact their families in the United States for a speedy transfer of funds. And in the case of health problems we can put them in touch with Spanish authorities."

The spokesman admitted, however, that the embassy could be of only limited assistance to the youngsters, many of whom have already been stranded out at the airport, sleeping on benches, for four or five days.

"Very Strict Controls"
"Charting a plane for them or advancing them money directly is prohibited by law. Money can only be advanced in very special circumstances and then it's governed by the very strictest controls. If there's a woman with heart trouble among them, we told them to agree among themselves that she should get the first available plane," the spokesman said.

A spokesman for TWA said: "Most of these people don't have valid tickets. They don't have reservations, so all we can do is get them onto flights on a standby basis. Most airlines have a reconfirmation rule and many of them did not bother to do this."

"This is an American holiday season because of Labor Day and school starts soon after, so there's this glut of people trying to get back. It's happening all over Europe."

A Wedding Is Missed
Al-Zuhairi Enad, 23, of Toledo, Ohio, said: "I've been here for three days. I confirmed my booking at the airline office in Rome. But here they say my name is not on the list. It looks as if it may be the 11th or 12th [of the month] before I get away."

Joe Rederi, 18, who was supposed to have been best man at his brother's wedding today in Cleveland, said: "I've been waiting around four days. I bought my round-trip ticket in New York and was told I could get a return date just two days before I wanted to get home. It's just not true."

Many of the students are broke and have not eaten for some time. Kathy Meehan, 21, of Seattle, Wash., said: "The airport authorities don't like us. They think we make the place look untidy. They come round and wake us up during the night. What do they expect us to do?"

Further Trouble Predicted
WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—The State Department and the Civil Aeronautics Board predict that many more Americans who have taken charter tourist flights to Europe this year will find themselves without a flight home. But the State Department says it's not sympathetic to demands that it bail out the stranded travelers by giving them free rides.

One group of 122 U.S. tourists finally flew home from London yesterday—their way paid by Britain's Caledonian Airways and the Wimpy International hamburger chain. They had had three nights of camping in Gatwick Airport's lounge and countless exchanges with the American Embassy.

They were stranded because the charter company handling their flight—Daedalus Travel, Inc.—announced that it was "suspending operations."

"The U.S. Embassy has been totally useless and negative," said tourist Ruth Jacobs of New York. "We feel very hostile toward them. The British, on the other hand, have been absolutely marvelous over this."

State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray 3d disputed the charge. He said the U.S. Embassy in London did what it could, including offering loans to those who might claim they were destitute, but drew the line against demands for a free ride home at U.S. taxpayers' expense.

Travelers 'Not Destitute'
"Those Americans who can afford to go to Europe are, on the face of it, not destitute," Mr. Bray said, adding that most who find themselves stranded went abroad on "illegal charters" in the first place.

State Department and CAB officials said perhaps 700 more Americans still fanned out across Europe will shortly find themselves in a similar predicament from the failure of Daedalus.

A CAB spokesman estimated that over all more than 10,000 persons will have found themselves overseas this year without the homeward flight they had expected.

Senghor Addresses Poetry Convention
KNOX, Belgium, Sept. 1 (UPI).—President Leopold Senghor of Senegal today addressed an international congress "as a poet and not as a statesman."

Mr. Senghor lectured at the opening session of the Tenth International Poetry Biennial on the evolution of poetry since the 19th century.

The four-day meeting was opened by Arthur Haulot, Belgian commissioner-general for tourism, who dedicated it "to the poets of Prague and Athens who are gagged and cannot be among us."

U.S. Will Induct 15,900 for Army By End of Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Selective Service System today announced that about 15,900 men holding lottery numbers 85 and below will be drafted during the October-December period.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird hopes to stop all inductions by the end of this year, six months ahead of President Nixon's formal goal for changing to an all-volunteer military force.

None of those being drafted are being sent to Vietnam unless they volunteer to serve there.

Fixing the final 1972 lottery ceiling at 95 "assures almost three-fourths of the men who faced induction during 1972 that they will not be called this year," officials said.

O'Brien Threatens to Desert Campaign, Calls for Shake-Up after the meeting, he said that he had no real intention of quitting.

Mr. Mankiewicz and Mr. Hart attempted to play down the troubles in the campaign, with Mr. Mankiewicz remarking that the meeting was devoted to "tightening things up" and that "now everyone is singing out of the same hymn."

Mr. Hart said that there were "some problems of communication and coordination" that were in the process of being "resolved."

But another participant in Wednesday night's meeting, who asked for anonymity, said that he agreed with Mr. O'Brien's criticism. What the campaign desperately needs, he said, "is one man in charge with a big black whip."

"If you want an honest judgment," one middle-level official said, "we're living in unmitigated chaos. People are spending half their time plotting against other people in the campaign."

One well-placed source, asked for evidence of conflict, listed the following episodes:

Mr. Westwood, convinced that Mr. Hart's management of the field organization had been inadequate, tried and failed to strip him of that responsibility earlier this month. Mr. Hart survived when he went to Sen. McGovern and persuaded him that his retention was essential if the senator was not to lose the backing of the young people who aided in his nomination.

No statewide co-ordinator could be found for California, so the state was split in two sections. The McGovern campaign there has become bogged down in state politics, especially the forthcoming

ces Rise, Traffic Piles Up Romans Face New Crises

By Paul Hoffmann

Sept. 1 (NYT)—A Roman's dollar last spring now is a dollar and a half. Suddenly there is a market in meat and vegetables. The unseasonable weather is the traffic jams in a city.

are the woes that find waiting for them as they drift back from their vacations. "Is the dolce vita?" ask risks who keep thronging streets as many of them as American. The plagues at Rome's airports are notorious. One of the most decrepit and chaotic, greeted by sullen faces, emperors and occasionally, in the earthy local, a understanding. enough, smiles remain, specially for young women.

erman Court Sympathizes with Romanian in Kidnap

BRUM, Germany, Sept. 1.—A Romanian refugee who kidnapped two children and took them to Romania to smuggle her own child to the West received a suspended sentence today a Bochum criminal court.

red-haired nurse, Heleneescu, 26, faced charges of kidnapping, deprivation of freedom and complicity in falsification of documents as a result of kidnapping two children and taking them to Romania.

sentence was mild because State Prosecutor Siegfried blamed Romanians for laws "which conflict with national human rights."

Lazarescu fled to West from Romania in the year of 1971. But she left her two children, Valentin and Marcel, 3.

February, a German friend sent her back to Romania along with her children, a six-year-old tampered with the mufflers to make them quieter. The roar kept many Romans and visitors in hotel rooms, sleepless long after midnight.

But at least Rome is a city where one can still walk around at night without fear of being mugged. It seems that the robbery is being done by the friendly neighborhood grocer.

"It's like wartime all over again," a middle-aged housewife complained. "Today I bought a pound of veal through the back door of my butcher's at 43 because he wouldn't sell it front at the fixed price of 42.50. The next thing will be we'll have to drive to the countryside and buy our meat, eggs and vegetables directly from the farmers as we did when I first got married 27 years ago."

Government Effort
The new black market is a result of the government's attempt to curb the soaring cost of living in the capital by putting price ceilings on 130 food items. Merchants are fighting the freeze order and selling only low-quality products at the fixed prices. Customers who want better cuts of meat and choice fruit and vegetables get them if they pay more.

Premier Giulio Andreotti explained publicly that the food price freeze was a 60-day experiment limited to the capital, where the distribution system is particularly chaotic—one out of every 100 Romans is a merchant. Economists say that price ceilings have failed to work in Rome ever since Emperor Diocletian tried to stabilize the cost of living in a futile edict of AD 301.

Butchers to Strike
ROME Sept. 1 (UPI)—Romans face a meatless week because of a protest against a price freeze. The local butchers' association voted late last night to remain closed Monday through Saturday. The union demanded government action to cut the wholesale price of meat. They suggested that import duties on meat should be abandoned. Italy imports most of its meat.

Yugoslav girl, and Petra Hellmich, 3, a German boy from Bochum.

She left Rosi and Petra with her sister in Romania and brought out her own children by using the passports of the kidnapped boy and girl.

Seven days later, Romanian authorities returned the two children through diplomatic channels to their parents in Yugoslavia and Germany. Mrs. Lazarescu then surrendered to West German police.

Court Impressed
During the two-week trial, the Romanian nurse impressed the court with the strength of her love, which drove her to desperate action.

The parents of the Yugoslav girl were not represented in court because they were foreigners. But Petra Hellmich's mother and father told the court that the kidnapping of their son caused them great anguish.

Mrs. Lazarescu claimed that Mrs. Hellmich cooperated in the scheme, but the German woman denied it.

The Romanian nurse, who had spent six months in jail pending trial, showed no emotion as the court announced the suspended sentence.

The court also sentenced Heinz Gerd Ziegert, 25, the German friend who helped in the operation, to a one-year suspended sentence and a 2,400-mark fine. It also ordered both defendants to pay the costs of the trial.

Sadat Skips Israel Willing to Soften Terms Main Issues in Radio Speech

CAIRO, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today paid tribute to the Libyan and Syrian people in a speech celebrating the first anniversary of the Federation of Arab Republics, of which he is the leader.

But his 20-minute speech over Cairo radio made no mention of the Middle East crisis or Egypt's relations with Russia following his decision in July to end the Soviet military presence in Egypt. The only apparent reference to Moscow-Cairo relations came when Mr. Sadat said: "We will be friends of those who befriended us, but we will stick to our principles, and we shall adhere only to those who uphold righteousness."

Quiet Tone
Mr. Sadat's speech, which was carried simultaneously by Damascus and Tripoli radio, surprised observers here by its quiet tone.

The only reference to the confrontation with Israel came when he said: "We are facing a battle and we will never forget the rights of the people of Palestine."

The speech also marked the third anniversary of the Libyan revolution, and President Sadat paid particular praise to President Moammar Qadhafi and the Libyan leadership and people.

Egypt and Libya agreed to merge following meetings in Tobruk and Benghazi last month. "Libya's revolutionary leaders and the people of Libya are the hope of the Arab world," he said.

Great Support
Mr. Sadat said that during its first year, the Arab Federation had been of "great support and help to all Arab countries."

"The world today is owned only by the strong. We will be friends of those who befriended us, but we will stick to our principles and we shall adhere only to those who uphold righteousness."

In a related development, sources here said that Mr. Sadat will visit the United Nations in New York toward the end of the year.

They also said that Mr. Sadat will also make a visit to France in November as part of Egypt's campaign to win strong support from Western Europe for its stand in the Middle East crisis.

There was no immediate confirmation of either report. Meanwhile, Egyptian Foreign Minister Mourad Ghaleb arrived in Geneva today for talks with Gunnar Jarring, the United Nations special Middle East peace envoy.

Israel Willing to Soften Terms On Peace, Mrs. Meir Says

JERUSALEM, Sept. 1 (UPI).—Premier Golda Meir said tonight Israel is willing to soften its stance on a peace agreement with Cairo. She said the Soviet withdrawal from Egypt did not influence its willingness.

"The (Suez Canal) cease-fire line will not be the final line and there will be some giving-in," Mrs. Meir told two interviewers on national television.

She said Israel proposed negotiations before the Soviet withdrawal in July, and proposed negotiations afterward. "Our war was not with the Russians and we are not trying to achieve peace with them."

"I don't think it [the Soviet pullout] has any influence on our willingness to give in," she said.

As for Jordan, Mrs. Meir said the only way King Hussein would sign a peace agreement is if Israel returned to the pre-1967 war borders. "But I don't know anybody who is willing to go back to those lines," she said.

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said last night Israel can come to terms with Egypt on a partial settlement based on reopening the canal. Foreign Minister Abba Eban predicted that Egypt and other Arab states will seriously consider peace talks next year if the U.S. Middle East policy does not change after the presidential elections in November.

In an interview marking the Jewish new year beginning next Friday, Mrs. Meir said Israel has a peace plan but one that does not contain new borderlines.

"We have a peace plan, but without maps. We cannot go to our neighbors and say we have maps and if you accept the maps there will be peace and if you do not there won't be peace. The neighbors will say this is an ultimatum."

"This is not the way. The way is to be flexible, to give in a little," Mrs. Meir said.

She said Israel was building new settlements in the occupied territories because of security reasons.

"Security requires it because not all the territories are going to be returned," Mrs. Meir said. She did not elaborate.

She said the Arab states from which Israel seized the land in the 1967 war "should not think that we are keeping the land on deposit for them."

"There is no law that says we have to keep it as a deposit," she said. "As long as there is no peace, we are standing armed in case hostilities will start somewhere. But, at the same time, we are doing things inside the occupied territories."

Twelve settlements have been established by Israel's pioneer fighting youth, Nahal, in occupied territory, the last of which was set up Aug. 24.

Riot Police Halt March by Youths In Chile's Capital

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 1 (AP).—Riot police broke up a march by striking high school students today as protests mounted against Chile's leftist government.

Marxists, meanwhile, prepared to mobilize 15 million persons throughout the nation on Monday to celebrate the second anniversary of President Salvador Allende's election.

The Federation of Secondary Students of Santiago, which is controlled by the opposition Christian Democrats, pulled 10,000 students out of public high schools today for the third time in two weeks.

The federation is protesting the appointment of a woman principal at a Santiago girls' high school. She belongs to a political party that supports Mr. Allende.

Riot police dispersed a student march with tear gas.

'Cod War' Opens Without Incident

By Joe Alex Morris Jr.

REYKJAVIK, Sept. 1.—The "cod war" between Iceland and trawlermen from Britain and West Germany opened today with no shots reported, no boardings, and no incidents.

More than 100 British and West German trawlers reportedly violated the new 50-mile fishing limit, which went into effect today. Fog, rain, and bad weather hampered Icelandic security forces, but coast guard cutters and spotter aircraft sighted some intruders during the day.

Fisheries Minister Ludvig Josefsson claimed the first victory in the struggle. The British trawlers were fishing in two groups for their own protection, he said, leaving other fishing areas clear. "That's already a victory," he said.

Iceland unilaterally extended its fishing limits from 12 to 50 miles, claiming the fish crop is endangered by overfishing and with it the sole basis for the island's economy. More than 80 percent of Iceland's exports are fish products, and the island has no other significant resources.

Ringed Speech

The move was challenged in the International Court at The Hague, which issued a one-year injunction. Iceland ignored it, and in a speech ringing with Churchillian overtones, Premier Olafur Johannesson called on his 300,000 people to unite for a long struggle.

The country has responded. Public buses all flew Icelandic flags here today, and citizens sported flag buttons in their lapels. The foreign flags usually flying alongside the Icelandic one in front of hotels and elsewhere were all taken down, leaving only the local banner.

All five Icelandic Coast Guard boats put to sea early today. Many of the British ships had painted out their identification numbers and names, but others openly flaunted them.

Shapira Will Return To Israeli Cabinet

JERUSALEM, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—Jacob Shimon Shapira, who resigned his post as Israeli minister of justice several months ago, announced Wednesday that he had agreed to return to the cabinet.

He said that he was resuming his post at the request of Premier Golda Meir. He resigned following a public outcry aroused by an investigation into irregularities in the operations of the government-owned Netzei-Neft Oil Co.

The Icelandic strategy is to simply take names for the time being and try to prevent any incidents such as marred a previous cod war in 1958. But many of the trawlers came prepared for the worst.

Icelandic patrol vessels reported many trawlers had rigged fishing nets up six feet high over their gunwales to prevent boardings. But as Premier Johannesson explained, "Although they might

Astronaut Tied To Stamp Scandal Given New Post

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Sept. 1 (AP).—Astronaut Alfred M. Worden, one of the three spacemen involved in the Apollo-15 stamp cover scandal, has been transferred out of the astronaut office and relocated at another space agency center, officials said yesterday.

Air Force Col. Worden, 40, will become a research engineer and test pilot at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., effective Sept. 11, space agency officials said.

Col. Worden and his Apollo-15 crewmates, David R. Scott and James B. Irwin, were reprimanded by the space agency for smuggling about 400 stamp covers to the moon and back during their 1971 lunar landing mission. An investigation by the agency showed the trio planned to pocket $7,000 apiece for the sale of a portion of the stamp covers.

The National Aeronautics and Space Agency later said the astronauts declined the money although 99 of the stamp covers were sold in Europe for about $1500 each.

Col. Scott earlier was transferred out of the astronaut corps and Col. Irwin has retired.

Asked if the involvement in the stamp cover scheme was the reason for Col. Worden's transfer, a space agency spokesman said, "That was one of the considerations, but this also is part of the planned phasedown of the astronaut office as a result of the declining number of space flights."

Chichester's Funeral

PLYMOUTH, England, Sept. 1 (AP).—Sir Francis Chichester, 70, pioneer aviator and lone yachtsman, was buried among the seafarers of his native Devonshire today. Crowds gathered at St. Andrew's church for the funeral. Then his body was taken to the village churchyard at Shirwell, where his father was parish for many years.

escape for the time being they will be punished later.

By this he meant that when they put into an Icelandic port because of bad weather, illness on board, or the need to carry out repairs, they would be penalized.

Trawler Forces Join

LONDON, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—British and West German fishing vessels joined forces today off the coast of Iceland to strengthen their opposition against Iceland's new 50-mile fishing limit.

Charles Hudson, president of the British Trawlers' Association, said the two nations were cooperating in resisting the Icelandic ban, which went into force at midnight.

He said 73 British trawlers were fishing in Icelandic waters and were being aided by several West German supply vessels as skipper reported strong surveillance by Icelandic patrol boats.

At the same time, British officials said any further Anglo-Icelandic talks on their fishing dispute could not begin before mid-October.

Japanese Open Talks in Peking

PEKING, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—The first Japanese government delegation to visit China since the Communists assumed power in 1949 began talks today with Chinese officials in preparation for the forthcoming visit here of Premier Kakuei Tanaka.

The meetings began this afternoon as President Nixon and Mr. Tanaka discussed relations between their countries and China in Honolulu.

There has been no mention of the Hawaii meeting in the Chinese press. But Peking government leaders are thought to be closely interested in the Honolulu conversations, which range over the spectrum of American-Japanese relations.

VENICE FESTIVAL

Ken Russell's New Film:
Fellini, Mack Sennett

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

VENICE, Sept. 1 (UPI)—Judging from the warm welcome accorded Ken Russell's new film, "Savage Messiah," at the Venice festival last night, it is destined for commercial success.

One might have supposed that Russell, who displayed a memorable sensitivity and a persuasive cry of sense in his dramatization of D. H. Lawrence's novel, "Women in Love," would have tapped these resources in bringing the "savage" romance of the French chieftain Henri Gautier and his mistress, Sophia Brzeka, against the scene of pre-1914 Paris and London to the screen. It is not the case. The latest Russell film is in the later Russell manner, all sound and fury and signifying only that its director would like to be a combination of Fellini and Mack Sennett.

The Gautier-Brzeka love story, suggested by the H. S. Ede account, is reproduced here in terms of an inferior musical comedy libretto, while the dialogue with its against-the-grain abysmal humor—Christopher Logue is responsible for the adaptation—sounds as though it had been composed by George Robey on one of his off days. The actors and camera bounce about like demented tennis balls to galvanize the strained script into a semblance of life and there is more frantic physical action than you would find in a mute product of the Al Christie lot. A stark, moving tale of aesthetic aspiration, desperation and passion has been given the worst sort of movie works. The result is a burlesque, feverish, gross and puerile.

The Acting

The acting, astonishing under the circumstances, makes a brave battle to hold the line, hinting of a tug-of-war between the directorial concept and the personal interpretations. Dorothy Tutin, a luminary of the London stage, was apparently engaged to do an imitation of Greta Garbo as Mrs. Tichonoffsky. She partially succeeds in wriggling out of her straightjacket assignment and succeeds, in as far as that is possible, in humanizing her grotesque role. Scott Antony, fresh from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, fights valiantly against plot to convert him into a clownish jumping jack. The odds are against him, but he makes a promising first impression. Never for a moment can one believe that Miss Tutin is Polish or that Mr. Antony is French, both evidently having been instructed to be as British as Charing Cross, but both are talented players even here amid the smoking rubble of the Ede biography.

Michael Bulgakov's "The Master and Margarita" is among the most powerful of post-revolutionary Russian novels, a book of profound depth and satirical brilliance. It is a study of the artist's soul under socialism and, though in its pages reality and fantasy mingle, it is obviously a bitter and accusing autobiography. As is the case of all novels of the first order, it moves simultaneously on several planes. It would probably be impossible to capture it in its entirety in a screen script and many of its incidents challenge directorial ingenuity. Take but one example: The incident in which the symbolic black cat, fare in paw, boards a Moscow streetcar. Just how would this be visualized without resorting to the animated cartoon?

The gifted Yugoslav director Alexander Petrovic has eliminated this delightful sequence and many others in his adaptation, but he has caught in his film edition the sardonic spirit of the original and much of its curious fascination. His dramatization is uneven at times, lacking a unifying theatrical rhythm, but despite this, one is enthralled by the strange, sinister narrative and the resurrection of literary Moscow in the 1920s. Minny Farmer as Margarita is merely ornamental, but Ugo Tognazzi, tackling a serious role as the tormented writer, Alain Cuny as the diabolic magician who de-nudes dialectical materialism, and the Yugoslav actors recruited to enact the satanists and the death-dealing commissars—one can rarely differentiate between them, a sly touch—contribute to this rich feast of ironic comedy.

Volker Schlöndorff's "Strohfeuer" (Straw Fire) is all for women's lib, but due to its uneasy engineering, it might be mistaken for propaganda of the opposition. Its heroine, one hopes, is not representative and its handling suggests a women's magazine rather than an endorsement of the feminine liberation movement.

The leading lady is quite a hopeless case. To declare her independence she divorces her husband and he is granted custody of their child. She then seeks a career, but appears to be unequipped for any job. She takes singing and tap-dancing lessons, but shows no aptitude for either art. She would like to be an interpreter, but cannot master Japanese. She obtains temporary employment as a furrier's model and then employment in an art gallery and finally gives up and gets married again. When Nora, walked out of her home in Ibsen's "Doll's House," her slamming of the door was heard around the world. Schlöndorff in his well-intended film merely pictures a nitwit making a series of scenes.

French Resort Lionizes
Champion Yachtsman

By Hebe Dorsey

DEAUVILLE, France, Sept. 1.—The chief attraction in Deauville is a 65-foot, two-mast trimaran, Pen Duick IV, in which Alain Colas won the last transatlantic single-handed yacht race.

"Yes, I cried like a child," Mr. Colas said, "when I realized I had won."

Designed by French sailor Eric Tabarly, Pen Duick IV looks like a giant aluminum grasshopper. It is drawing hundreds of visitors and French cabinet ministers are taking turns sailing with Mr. Colas.

"It makes me very happy," Mr. Colas said, "because I have a passion for my boat and I am pleased to share her with other boat lovers."

French Prime Minister Pierre Messmer is at the top of the list. He is expected next week. Former minister Roger Frey was disappointed. Pen Duick IV could not take him out one day because of the low tide. But Mr. Frey caught up with Mr. Colas at a dinner at Count Michel d'Ornano's, Deauville's mayor. After Mr. Colas finished recounting his adventures, including being pursued by 150 sharks, Mr. Frey sang Russian songs and Teura Krauss, Mr. Colas's Tahitian fiancée, danced the tango.

A former French teacher at Sydney University, Mr. Colas, 28, got the sailing bug in Australia. Within six years, he met Mr. Tabarly, became good enough to go sailing with him and eventually resigned his teaching job and bought Pen Duick IV for $34,000.

A compact young man with long sideburns, a gentle manner and a fierce profile, Mr. Colas calls himself "an ordinary guy. But once I'm hooked onto something, I stick it out." Although he looks quite good in a dinner jacket and red velvet bow tie, he said that "I feel better around my boat." But he submits to being lionized by Deauville society with remarkable ease and patience.

Asked if he got any sleep during the race, he said: "Yes, half an hour here and there." What about food? "I can tell you that a tomato lasts eight days, a cucumber 14 and onions forever." He added that he took naps every day ("an old habit") and is about to publish a book, tentatively titled "On Tour du Monde Pour une Victoire." (Around the World for a Victory.)

It took Mr. Colas three years to get ready for the race. His most extensive race from La Reunion to France took four months and he covered three times the length of the 2,500 nautical miles transatlantic. His fiancée was along. Did she like the sea? "No," she said, "but I think she liked the captain."

Alain Colas and Teura Krauss in Deauville

Last weekend, Mr. Colas was lending his aura to Port-Deauville, a new yacht harbor being built next to Deauville's famous wood plank promenade, known as Les Planches. The promoter, Claude Devidal, also built Saint Raphael yacht harbor and is a keen yachtsman himself.

Yacht Harbors

Port-Deauville, with two yacht harbors (and room for 1,250 craft) and a special yachting village including 550 marinas, hotel and shopping center, should give Deauville a whole new look. It will also change the life of yachtsmen who have had problems getting in and out of Deauville because of the tide. The new harbor, which should be completed next August, is equipped with one of the most modern lock and sluice systems in Europe and will allow yachts to pass in and out at any time of day and night.

The British, who love Deauville, are happy. A few of them, all yacht club members, came over last weekend of Mr. Devidal and dec project "super."

Otherwise, Deauville the same—a bastion of routine is golf, polo and serene luncheons cured lavins.

With Mayor d'Ornano, Deauville is also acquiring political flavor. French Minister Maurice Schumann is seen playing in Omar Sharif in the Hotel Royal and the Embassy just bought most beautiful villas, next door to the hotel. Bousquet, textile magnate and racing enthusiast, a weekend retreat for motorists.

Theater in London: A Powerful, Polemical Play

By John Walker

LONDON (UPI)—At the enterprising Oval House Theatre Club in South London, Bernard Pomerance's "Fool Novos" is a powerful piece of political theater, an angry, impassioned, finely written, finely staged play on political corruption in Brazil. It has a shattering impact.

Mr. Pomerance is a 32-year-old New Yorker who settled in London four years ago. His first play, on Vietnam, was seen at the Alchemist Free Theatre earlier this year. In his new play, what really angers him is not so much the brutality of the current Brazilian regime as the ambiguous roles of its American advisers, whom he sees as totally corrupt.

Over the stage, as over these characters' actions, there hangs a huge dollar sign. The power lies with Mr. Big, the representative of the American oil companies, who treats the Brazilian president as if he were a recalcitrant schoolboy.

The corruption lies with the Americans' bland refusal to recognize the realities of the situation. Their concern is with money-making and appearances. Mr. Big, ordering the president to stop police brutality, tells him: "Investing in old torture town is not good for the image." But he happily accepts the evidence of a government commission that no violence exists, one that has been blatantly rigged by an American public relations expert and a U.S. adviser to the Brazilian security forces.

Thus the American security man, Chevy (Richard Pender), regards his colleagues as sadists and the politicians as contemptible "vomit on the brain"—but still works for them, proud of his professional attitude. "What I did to you wasn't personal," he says to someone he tortured with electric shock, and he means it.

The play, in a series of short sharp scenes, follows the adventures of "Fool Novos," leader of a group of urban guerrillas. It begins with him at the height of his success and ends with his death but with the continuation of the struggle against an oppressive tyranny.

How accurate the play is, in its depiction of torture and brutality, of a regime propped up by cynical profit-minded American big business, I cannot say. Mr. Pomerance was inspired to write it through contact with the work of the Brazilian writer José Vincente.

Certainly, it is theoretically convincing. Certainly, as polemical theater it is powerful, exciting, and effective; even though, this far from the action, its purpose must be limited.

Mr. Pomerance writes with scathing wit, particularly in a scene where Chevy peddled as his wife off away in her kitchen later scene when at television to denounce.

Roland Rees directs, especially in a police raids that put action. The acting is superb. Bernard Pomerance, a president, Oscar Jr. police chief, and Ju as the victim of torture.

Chief Executive OVERSEAS PROPERTY

to control the expanding overseas companies of a well known and profitable factory leasing group. This is a new appointment based to the west of London.

- THE TASK is twofold: to control a company in Belgium and co-ordinate through local management the operations of established companies in Canada, Australia and France; to research and initiate new developments in other countries with emphasis on Europe.
- EXPERIENCE in industrial or commercial property development and fluency in French are mandatory requirements. Career development could have been in property management in an international company, in a major firm of estate agents or in a property development company with overseas interests. Professional qualification could be a chartered surveyor, but a record of business achievement is of prime importance.
- THE SALARY indicator is not less than £8,000 with share participation. Preferred age is middle to late 30's.

Write in complete confidence to P. T. Premise as adviser to the group.

Japan Need Not Curb Sales
To Britain, Parley Agrees

TOKYO, Sept. 1 (AP-DJ).—Japanese and British electronics industry representatives agreed today not to take any immediate mandatory or voluntary steps to curb Japan's rapid increase of electronics exports, particularly of color television sets, to Britain, officials said.

they agreed that there exists no necessity for both countries to establish any immediate counter-measures against it.

The agreement was contained in a joint statement issued at the conclusion of a two-day meeting here to discuss problems faced by the Japanese and British electronics industries. They said.

They also agreed to meet again in London next spring. Sources said the Japanese and British representatives agreed that the British market for television is growing and that British television makers are unlikely to be damaged by the inflow of Japanese sets.

Japan Firms
In Cartel Raid

TOKYO, Sept. 1 (AP-DJ).—Officials of the Fair Trade Commission today raided 15 offices and premises of 14 Japanese paper manufacturing companies and their association headquarters to seek evidence of their alleged involvement in a secret cartel pact.

U.K. Tariff Plans
Studied by U.S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP-DJ).—The Commerce Department has completed a study of proposed British tariff changes on imports of industrial products from the United States, to take effect after Britain becomes a member of the Common Market next year.

Commission officials charged that the 14 firms have deliberately cut production of art and coated paper to raise prices. The paper makers, through the Japan Paper Association in Tokyo, have been adjusting their production and shipments of the two types of printing paper under an unauthorized cartel agreement since summer last year, officials said.

For U.S. exports of machinery, some chemicals and most other industrial products to Britain, the import duties will be scaled down gradually, starting Jan. 1, 1974, U.S. officials said.

They charged that the companies limited their joint production to only 12 days a month since last May, when prices of the two types of paper had begun declining. Through such an enforced supply shortage, they have repeatedly raised their sales prices, the officials added.

But for a few U.S. exports, such as certain types of photocopy paper, the British duties will go up to conform with the EEC external tariff duties.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Ford Orders Machine for Wankel

Ford Motor Co. has ordered a special machine tool for grinding the housing of the Wankel rotary engine. But Ford says it plans to use the machine experimentally, rather than for production purposes. Ford ordered the machine from Tri-Cordinate Corp., the company that has already sold General Motors two Wankel engines for use in its experimental rotary engine-making project. Ford's move follows by a few days GM's announcement that it is planning to make a commitment for "limited manufacturing facilities and tools" aiming toward public introduction of a Wankel-engine option on the Chevrolet Vega subcompact car in "about two years."

Procter & Gamble in Japan Venture

Procter & Gamble, of the United States, has signed a contract with two Japanese firms to establish a joint venture in Japan to manufacture and market soap and detergents. The two Japanese companies are Nippon Sunhome and C. Itoh. Nippon Sunhome is a joint soap and detergent sales firm equally owned by Asahi Electro-Chemical, Mitsubishi Kasei and Dai-Ichi Kogyo Seiyaku. The joint company, P. & G. Sunhome Co., is owned 50 percent by the U.S. firm, 45 percent by Nippon Sunhome and 5 percent by C. Itoh, a major trading firm. An application will be filed with the Ministry of International Trade and Industry for approval of the venture.

Toyota to Produce Brazil-Made Car

Toyota Motor Co. plans to begin manufacturing passenger autos in Brazil soon with parts and engines supplied by Brazilian manufacturers. Officials say the move is designed to cope with increasing demand for passenger autos in Brazil as well as to meet Brazilian government policy, which does not allow foreign auto makers to manufacture cars with parts and engines supplied by foreign manufacturers. Toyota is said to plan to manufacture Corolla models with an initial production goal of 1,000 to 1,500 vehicles a month. Toyota has been manufacturing four-wheel utility cars through its wholly owned subsidiary, Toyota do Brasil, since 1967.

IHI to Build Ships in Turkey

Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries has reached agreement with the Turkish government to construct a shipyard in Turkey. The yard, to be completed in 1975, is to have maximum production capacity for ships of 150,000 deadweight tons. Total cost of the yard is put at the equivalent of $40 million. Under the agreement, IHI will establish a joint venture in Turkey capitalized at $19 million. It will be owned 47 percent by IHI and 53 percent by the government-owned Turkish Maritime Bank Ltd. The new firm is to build 12 ships by 1980, mainly 10,000 to 20,000 deadweight-ton freighters. The Turkish government has asked the Japanese government for extension of long-term yen credit to finance a total cost of $100 million of shipyard construction and purchases of shipbuilding equipment to be supplied by IHI, company officials said.

U.S. Auto Output Expected to Rise

U.S. auto production is scheduled to be about 1.4 percent higher this month than a year earlier, with the 1973 model changeover essentially completed. Industry sources estimate September car production at about 782,760 units, up from the 782,071 cars built last September. This indicates U.S. auto production in the third quarter will come out very close to the 1.7 million cars originally planned and just about the same as the 1971 third quarter. The increase for the industry in the quarter is accounted for mainly by a 2.8 percent gain planned by General Motors.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (WP).—The nation's unemployment rate remained essentially unchanged last month at 5.6 percent, the Labor Department reported today.

As has been the pattern now for about a year, the number of jobs in the private economy increased substantially over the month, but so did the number of people seeking them.

The unemployment level, which Sen. George McGovern has made a major issue in his presidential campaign, was 5.5 percent in both June and July. The published rate each month is based on a survey of 50,000 households and is subject to some statistical error; an increase or decline of only one-tenth of one percentage point in a month is not regarded as statistically significant.

The rate is the percentage of those surveyed each month who say they have sought work in the preceding four weeks but have been unable to find it.

The rate averaged 4.9 percent in 1970, and hovered around the recession level of 5.9 percent all of last year. The administration has said that the economy will recover fast enough this year to bring it down into "the neighborhood of 5 percent" by year's end.

Sen. McGovern has promised that his first administration would bring the economy up to full employment, which economists define as an unemployment rate of 4 percent or less.

The political impact of the unemployment rate is a source of much uncertainty and speculation. There were 68.4 million Americans in the labor force in August, according to today's report, meaning that many wanted jobs. About 38.5 million had jobs. There were 4.86 million unemployed.

The number of unemployed, on this unadjusted basis, actually declined about 340,000 for the month. Normally, however, it declines slightly faster as the summer influx of students leaves the labor force to return to school.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, unemployment was thus fractionally up. Employment, on the same basis, increased by 290,000. Extra Solomon, a member of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisors, noted at a press conference that "more than all of the August rise" was among teenagers, "offsetting a fall in unemployment for adult men and women."

He added that "most of the recorded increase in teenage unemployment was among 16 and 17-year-olds and . . . part-time job-seekers."

Pasco Makes a Cash Offer
For Some Richfield Assets

By Clare M. Reckert

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (NYT).—Pasco Inc., a 52 percent-owned subsidiary of Studebaker-Worthington Inc., has made a cash offer to Atlantic Richfield Co. for several oilfields in Wyoming, the Sinclair Wyoming refinery and some 2,500 service station retail outlets together with varying interests in pipelines.

Terms were not disclosed by Henry Hooker, president of Pasco, but trade sources estimated the transaction involved at least $140 million. Bank financing has been arranged by Pasco, subject to approval of the Securities & Exchange Commission, it was stated.

The Sinclair Wyoming refinery included in the proposed purchase has a daily capacity of between 30,000 and 40,000 barrels.

A spokesman for Atlantic Richfield confirmed receipt of the offer, "which is being studied," he said. Last November the Justice Department rejected American Petroleum as a prospective buyer of the properties, then said to be valued at $150 million.

Meanwhile Colorado Interstate Gas Co. lost in its efforts to assume control of the assets of the Pacific Northwest pipeline system of El Paso Natural Gas Co. because of a change in ownership, a court ruled this week. The court had chosen Colorado as the successful applicant to acquire Pacific Northwest last June. It said a change in command at the company had forced it to revoke the decision.

The Supreme Court had ordered El Paso to divest itself of the

N.Y. Prices Edge Up in Dull Trade

By Alexander R. Hammer

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (NYT).—The stock market posted its third consecutive advance today in slow trading. Analysts attributed the upswing partly to investors' relief that the Federal Reserve Board did not raise its discount rate yesterday.

difference. The stock market will be closed on Monday because of Labor Day.

Another encouraging factor for the recent rise in the market has been that August retail sales have risen strongly and manufacturers' inventories have increased. Both are considered favorable economic indicators.

A number of analysts and brokers had expected that the Fed would raise the discount rate to 4 3/4 percent from 4 1/2 percent, the rate it has been since last December.

These sources attributed the slow trading to pre-holiday index closed ahead 6.32 at 970.05, its high for the day.

Turnover on the exchange dipped to 11.60 million shares from 12.34 million yesterday.

One of the big gainers was Black & Decker, manufacturer of portable power tools. The issue soared 5 to 104 3/4, with only 8,100 shares changing hands.

A good mover in the active list was National Cash Register, which advanced 1 1/4 to 37. A few brokerage firms have recently recommended the stock in their market letters.

Pressure on Glammers

Most of the glamour issues were under pressure. In this group, the biggest loser was Polaroid, which tumbled 3 3/4 to 113 3/4 in heavy trading. The weakness in the issue followed the news that the company was delaying national introduction of its new pocket camera until next year.

Among the other glammers, ARA Service dropped 1 1/4 to 167 3/4, Digital Equipment slipped 1 1/4 to 93, and Corning Glass was down 1 3/4 to 244 1/4.

Winnebago Industries, a manufacturer of motor homes, moved ahead 2 1/8 to 35 5/8, rebounding from recent weakness.

Purrolator, however, tacked on 1 3/8 to 67 7/8, ex-dividend. Ford was unchanged at 67 3/8. General Motors tacked on 1/4 to 79.

Tenoro Petroleum lost 3/4 to 41 5/8. It has registered a 525,000 offering of common shares with the Securities & Exchange Commission.

United Aircraft topped the aerospace group, rising 5/8 to 38 3/4. Eastern rose 1 1/8 to 25 1/2 among the air carriers.

J. C. Penney, a strong performer in the retail chain group, climbed 2 3/8 to 83 5/8.

Sears, Roebuck, which spurred 3 3/8 yesterday, added another 1/4 to 107 1/8. It has reported sharply higher August sales.

Volatile Superior Oil gained 2 1/2 to 310, but Natamco fell 7/8 to 61 3/4.

Prices advanced in light trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index rose 0.05 to 26.67 while advances topped declines, 493 to 374. Turnover was 2.81 million shares, down from 3.13 million yesterday.

Pic'n Pay Stores fell 3 3/4 to 10 1/2. It reported a per-share operating net of 46 cents for the year ended June 30, down from 43 cents a year earlier.

Dillard Department Stores A lost 1 1/2 to 28 1/2. It has filed a registration with the SEC covering the proposed offering of 338,000 shares of Class A common.

U.S. Monetary Expansion
Continues at a Rapid Pace

By H. Erich Heinemann

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (NYT).—Monetary expansion continued at a rapid rate in the last two weeks, the Federal Reserve System reported yesterday, despite a decline in the money supply in the week ended Aug. 23.

At the same time, the Fed reported that, according to some measures, conditions in the money market had tightened in the week ended Wednesday.

Borrowings by commercial banks from the Fed rose to an average of $477 million a day in the week ended Aug. 30, up from $350 million the preceding week and the highest level since November of last year.

Banks seek to borrow from the Fed when they are temporarily short of funds to satisfy the required reserves that they must hold against their deposits. Alternatively, they may seek to borrow when the Fed discount rate at which it lends to its members is well below the cost of money in the open market, as it is at present.

However, despite the rise in borrowing, the Fed made no move yesterday to increase its discount rate, which has been at 4 1/2 percent since last December.

Other Rates Rise

But while the discount rate stayed at 4 1/2 percent, other interest rates rose sharply. The average rate on three-month Treasury bills—a bellwether of the money market—rose to 4.24 percent in the week ended Wednesday, up from 4.01 percent the week before, which bankers said was an unusually large increase in this rate.

The rate on federal funds—overnight, interbank loans—jumped to 4.80 percent, up from 4.75 percent the previous week. The key interest rate on 90 to 180-day commercial paper jumped to 4.85 percent, which should be sufficient, bankers said, to trigger increases in the prime lending rates of the major commercial banks that key their charges to these unsecured corporate notes.

Two such banks, First National City and Irving Trust, in effect announced today that their prime rate would move to 5 1/2 percent from Monday. Citibank's rate had been 5 3/8 percent, while Irving Trust's rate was 5 1/4 percent.

Money Supply Up

In its regular weekly report, the Fed said that the money supply—most checking accounts at the banks plus currency in the public's hands—had averaged $240.3 billion a day in the four weeks ending Aug. 26, which represented an 8.8 percent seasonally-adjusted compound annual rate over the three months ended on that date.

During the last year, money has grown at a 5.3 percent annual rate. Reserved available to support private nonbank deposits, the Fed said, averaged $30.59 billion in the four weeks ended on Wednesday. According to calculations of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, this indicated that the Fed was expanding its money supply at a target for their day-to-day operations—expanded at an 8.5 percent annual rate in the quarter ended on that date.

This compares with a 7.3 percent rate of expansion in the last year.

Non-Moslems Build Mecca Hotel
Through Closed-Circuit Television

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (NYT).—In Mecca, the holy city where only Moslems may tread, closed-circuit television is allowing 20 French and German technicians to supervise the construction of the Mecca Inter-Continental Hotel.

In a control tower eight miles from the construction site, the Europeans constantly watch 700 Moslem workers and relay instructions to Moslem foremen by telephone and walkie-talkie. Fifteen mobile TV cameras are used.

In accordance with a Moslem law requiring each believer to journey to Mecca at least once in his lifetime, approximately one million pilgrims visit the Saudi Arabian city annually. The city 45 miles from the Red Sea port of Jidda is the birthplace of the Prophet Mohammed.

The new hotel—Mecca's first that is foreign-owned—was designed by the firm of Rolf Gutbrod and Frei Otto of Berlin and Stuttgart. Mr. Gutbrod, a West German national, is a Moslem.

The government of Saudi Arabia is financing the construction of the five-story hotel. It will include a convention hall for 1,500 persons, a conference center and a mosque. Outside each guest room will be a marble balcony with markings indicating where guests can stand to face the Kaaba, or sacred black stone, in the Belt of Allah, or the House of God, when they pray.

Building Outlays
Increase in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (Reuters).—The value of total new construction spending in July was at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of $121.4 billion, unchanged from the revised rate of June, the Commerce Department reported today.

The actual value of construction put in place in July, unadjusted, was $110.8 billion, 1 percent higher than June and 10 percent higher than July, 1971.

The seasonally-adjusted annual rate of new private construction in July was $82.4 billion, 1 percent less than the revised estimate for June, while the actual value of unadjusted construction was $84 billion, also 1 percent up from June and 15 percent higher than July, 1971.

Ford Breaks
43-Yr Record

DEARBORN, Mich., Sept. 1 (Reuters).—Ford Motor Co. said its U.S. assembly plants broke a 43-year production record for the month of August.

It said production of 183,647 units exceeded by 10 percent the previous record of 176,137 units for the month set in 1929, when the new model A Ford was at peak production. Last month also surpassed August 1971 production by nearly 19 percent.

How to gain the advantages of investment management for
a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If you have saved or acquired $5,000 to $50,000 in cash or securities, you naturally want to make your capital grow. Yet you may feel you are actually losing ground due to inflation and taxes, or perhaps to a lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, clients in 64 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management, a tested plan originally developed by a Boston family to manage its own common stock investments.

The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000 — though, as in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 15-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. V-1

How to gain the advantages
of investment management for
a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If you have saved or acquired $5,000 to $50,000 in cash or securities, you naturally want to make your capital grow. Yet you may feel you are actually losing ground due to inflation and taxes, or perhaps to a lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, clients in 64 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management, a tested plan originally developed by a Boston family to manage its own common stock investments.

The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000 — though, as in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 15-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. v-1

East German Woman Wins Javelin

Borzov Captures 100 Meters, Taylor of U.S. Takes 2d Place

By Jesse Abramson

MUNICH, Sept. 1 (UPI)—The crown of the world's fastest human passed today from the United States to a Ukrainian from Kiev, Valeri Borzov.

The first world-class Russian sprinter, the first Russian male to win an Olympic track title, Borzov captured the 100-meter dash in 10.14 seconds, beating the U.S. second-place finisher, Robert Taylor, by a margin of 0.02 seconds.

Borzov, 5-foot-11 and 182 pounds, hasn't a share of the world record of 9.9 seconds as held by American sprinter Eddie Hart and Ray Robinson. The two Ukrainians shut out yesterday when they arrived too late by minutes for their quarter-final heats. But in head-to-head competition, Borzov proved to be the more powerful sprinter, winning the semifinals and another 100-meter dash in the afternoon that he won No. 1.

Class of Field
The United States had won the 100 in the last two Olympics, with Bob Hayes at Tokyo and Jimmy Simon at Mexico, and had won seven of the last eight and 12 of the 18 Olympic 100 meters. But Borzov was the class today. He won all his heats in commanding fashion, in control from blocks to wire. He clocked 10.5 and 10.1 yesterday, 10.2 and 10.1 today, going against a mild breeze in the final which may have cost him some time. He threw up his arms in triumph in the last stride.

Taylor, a football wide receiver at Texas Southern who rose from obscurity to make the U.S. team, is a slow starter but it cost him the gold medal. He was closing on Borzov the last 20 yards, but not fast enough to threaten Borzov's clear margin.

Miller is 3d

Taylor was timed in 10.2 for his silver medal a yard ahead of Jamaica's Lennox Miller, a University of Southern California graduate who was second in the event in 1968. Another Russian, Alexander Korneliuk, was fourth. "I've always had trouble starting," said Taylor. "I just couldn't get out there and I just couldn't catch him. Yes, I was upset by what happened yesterday, but once I went to the mark I thought only of the race. I knew the other two guys were in the stands forgetting this incident at all."

U.S. 3d in Javelin

The only other final of the day went to East Germany's Ruth Fuchs, the world record-holder in the women's javelin throw, who produced an Olympic-record toss of 63.88 meters (209 feet 7 inches) and beat her countrywoman Jacqueline Todten (62.84). Kathy Schmidt, an 18-year-old Long Beach (Calif.) City College freshman, took third with 59.24. Miss Schmidt had damaged her elbow two years ago, but came out of retirement this year to become the U.S. record-holder. She gave the U.S. women their first medal in the javelin since Babe Didrikson won in 1932 and their first field-event medal since 1956.

Steeplechase Records

An Olympic record was shattered twice in qualifying trials when Finland's Tapio Kantanen raced the 3,000-meter steeplechase course in 8 minutes 24.8 seconds (beating Belgian Gaston Roelants' 1964 mark of 8:30.8) and two heats later, Kenya's Amos Biwott, the defending champion, sliced the record to 8:23.8. The 24-year-old Biwott, who had won in Mexico's high altitude in slow time, proved that altitude wasn't the reason he and his high-altitude Kenyans had won three golds in distance races four years ago.

Kenya's Kip Keino, who says the steeplechase is "for animals," also qualified for the final.

His main aim, however, is to repeat as gold medalist in the 1,500-meter run.

There was another mishap for the U.S. 800-meter man, Rick Wohlhuter of Notre Dame who tripped and fallen yesterday to lose to Ken Swenson of Manhattan, Kan., the Pan-American champion, pulled a muscle at 200 meters in an 800 semifinal, fell to his knees off the track and walked disconsolately away clutching his groin. It left only cap-wearing Dave Wottle, the honeycombed runner from Canton, Ohio, to carry U.S. hopes in tomorrow's final. Wottle was apparently hopelessly boxed in fifth place, with only two to qualify, when he hit the stretch. Miraculously, he found a way opening on the rail, squeezed through and won with his thunderbolt kick.

All three U.S. discus men qualified, but the United States lost its last hope in the women's 800 when Madeline Manning Jackson, the 1968 champion, faded dimly in the closing 30 yards and just lost a qualifying spot to England's Rosemary Stirling in 2:02.4.

Disqualified on Coach's Blunder

2 U.S. Sprinters 'Cried Like Babies'

From Wire Dispatches

MUNICH, Sept. 1.—It was back-passing day in the American sector of the Olympic Village today as the U.S. squad reflected on the blunder which may have cost them a sprint gold medal. Eddie Hart and Raymond Robinson, two of the world's fastest humans, didn't make it to the starting blocks in time for a 100-meter heat yesterday and just about everyone was blaming everyone else after confusion over the racing schedules.

The same fate nearly fell to Robert Taylor of Houston yesterday but the sprinter made the track by scant seconds and was rushed into the starting blocks. Out of breath and without a warm-up, he finished second in the heat.

Today, Taylor was second to Russia's Valeri Borzov in the final of the 100 meters.

Hart and Robinson, co-holders of the world record with 9.9 seconds, were nowhere to be found today. "I hear they cried like babies," said Olga Connolly, the U.S. discus thrower.

The only man who accepted the blame for the mix-up, veteran sprint coach Stan Wright of Sacramento (Calif.) State College, was also not available for comment today.

Yesterday he admitted, "It was my fault—I gave the wrong time."

Wright understood the time 16:15 meant 6:15 p.m. instead of 4:15 p.m.

"He feels awful—he feels like cutting his throat," a friend confided.

Blames the Americans

Olympic press chief Hans Klein said, "I am afraid the Americans have only themselves to blame." He pointed to the thick blue technical handbook issued to team officials, which clearly states: "16:15, 100 meters. Second round."

This was the time of the heat in which world record holders

Robinson and Hart should have taken part at the Olympic Stadium yesterday.

U.S. officials said they were working from wrong information. Other American sources say it was simply a case of the time 16:15 hours being taken to mean 6:15 p.m. instead of 4:15 p.m.

Easy Way Out

Meanwhile, athletes blamed their coaches. The coaches blamed the administrative office. The administrative office blamed the West German officials. The West German officials blamed the back to the Americans.

"They say they got the wrong information from us," said a spokesman of the West German organizers. "It is an easy way out. But I ask: 'Why did all the other countries show up on time?'"

Miss Gould Takes Third Gold Medal; De Mont Is Victor

By Bernard Kirsch

MUNICH, Sept. 1 (UPI)—Australia's Shane Gould probably won't catch the gold medal count of Mark Spitz but as far as women's swimming goes, she is seldom caught.

Miss Gould, 15, won her third gold medal in the 1972 Olympic Games tonight—and set her third world record—in another night dominated by the American men, if not their women. Rick De Mont who said he didn't think he was of Olympic quality until last April, came from behind to win the men's 400-meter freestyle while Japan's Mayumi Aoki won the women's 100-meter butterfly with a world record.

Japan, like Australia, was once a swimming powerhouse, dominating the 1932 and 1936 Games—and both countries are making comebacks this year. The Australian women were shut out in 1968 as the Americans won 13 of the 16 gold medals in the swimming program. That was all pre-Shane Gould, who earlier this year held every women's freestyle record from the 100-meter to the 1,500-meter.

Miss Gould was awesome tonight as she broke the world mark of 2 minutes 52.3 seconds by 1.8 seconds, winning in 2:50.56. She led at every stroke of the race and had just enough left to hold off American Shirley Babashoff, who recorded a 2:04.3. Also breaking the previous world mark, while finishing third, was American Keena Rothhammer, who swam 2:04.8.

U.S. Shut Out

The second and third by the American girls in the freestyle—they were shut out in the breaststroke—gave the swimming medal count to three golds, three silvers and two bronzes. The Australian women now have five gold medals, one by Gail Neal in the 400-meter individual medley, one by Beverly Whitfield in the 200-meter breaststroke, and three by Miss Gould.
